

I'm not robot

Continue

Air force 1 white low

Image: Shutterstock Deciding Whether you want to join the army is tough enough on its own, but even once you decide you want to sign up, then you need to figure out which branch of the army you want to be in. Two of the most attractive branches are the Air Force and the Navy. Joining one of them would be something to be proud of that not everyone could achieve. But which one would suit you best? There are many differences between the two. Would you rather travel the world and go to a bunch of exotic ports, even if you were stuck in a navy ship with hundreds of other men, or would you instead float through the air in a high-tech jet, even if it seemed extremely dangerous? Are you the type who's going crazy when you have to fly a plane? Do you get seasick when you have to sit on a boat? Do you look better with a sailor's hat or glasses? We have so many questions that if you take this quiz and answer a few of them, we can tell you if you should sign up for the Navy or the Air Force. PERSONALITY Would you fly for the Air Force, Navy or Marines? 5 Minutes Quiz 5 Min PERSONALITY Are You More Coastguard or Navy? 5 Minutes Quiz 5 Min PERSONALITY Which branch of the army do you belong in based on these skills and personality assessment? 5 Minutes Quiz 5 Min TRIVIA Do you know these U.S. Navy conditions? 6 Minutes Quiz 6 Min PERSONALITY What rank would you earn in the Royal Canadian Air Force? 5 Minutes Quiz 5 Min PERSONALITY Do you think more like the Army or navy? 5 Minutes Quiz 5 Min PERSONALITY Is Your Personality More Army or Navy? 5 Minute Quiz 5 Min PERSONALITY What Kind of Combat Pilot Are You? 5 Minutes Quiz 5 Min PERSONALITY Go on a fishing trip and we guess where you would rank in the Navy 5 Minute Quiz 5 Min PERSONALITY Which branch of the Army should you join based on your life skills? 5 Minute Quiz 5 Min How Much Do You Know About Dinosaurs? What is an octane rating? And how do you use a good noun? Lucky for you, HowStuffWorks Play is here to help. Our award-winning website provides reliable, easy-to-understand explanations of how the world works. From fun quizzes that bring joy to your day, to engaging photography and fascinating lists, HowStuffWorks Play offers something for everyone. Sometimes we explain how things work, other times, we ask you, but we are always looking in the name of fun! Because learning is fun, so stay with us! Playing quizzes is free! We send trivia questions and personality tests to your inbox every week. By clicking Sign In you agree to our privacy policy and confirm that you are 13 years of age or older. Copyright © 2020 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, a System1 Company The U.S. Air Force basic training program is designed to help recruits learn how to perform general military duties related to serving in the Air Force. The has strict guidelines for what recruits are allowed to bring to basic training and unapproved items will be confiscated and after graduation, according to AirForce.com, the official recruitment website of the military branch. Basic training has demanding responsibilities, so recruits are encouraged to simply live and rely on basic needs during their stay. Air Force recruits must spend three to four days worth of civilian clothing, including underwear. Women should remember panty snake and a white sports bra. Recruits can also have a watch, and their prescription glasses or contacts, if necessary. Civilian clothing has to be plain and conservative -- garish clothing is not allowed. Recruits should also include personal hygiene items such as shampoo, conditioner, liquid soap, toothpaste and a toothbrush, a square toothbrush tray, black shower shoes, deodorant, shaving equipment, feminine products, a hairbrush, fingernail clipper, and a hairnet for women, according to AirForce.com. Hygiene items should be easy to clean for inspection. Recruits are allowed to bring prescription drugs, but military doctors and pharmacists at the base will inspect them and reissue them. Recruits must bring the required paperwork for identification and bank account details so they can set up direct deposit accounts. A range of documentation, including your bank routing and account numbers, an ATM or debit card, your Social Security card, employment contract, driver's license, marriage license, birth certificates of dependents, university statements and military certifications, is required. You should also download and bring a copy of the Recruiter Assistant Program handbook, according to AirForce.com. The Air Force allows basic training recruits to communicate with friends and family during certain times. Recruits can bring stationery, envelopes, stamps, pre-paid phone cards, black ink pens and active mobile phones with chargers. They also need notebooks and paper for classroom assignments. Recruits have no way to add minutes to their cell phones, so they should arrive with minutes already loaded if they have a pay-as-you-go phone plan. The Air Force prohibits recruits from carrying certain items and will confiscate materials that do not meet the requirements. Recruits are not allowed to order tobacco, cigarettes, food, makeup, magazines, music players of any kind, personal running shoes or expensive jewelry, according to AirForce.com. The goal is to help recruits stay focused, with as few distractions as possible, so they are dedicated to their training. Their daily responsibilities are physically and mentally exhausting, so they don't have much time to enjoy luxury or entertainment anyway. Air Force One, the plane that carries the president of the United States, cost about $2 billion to build and more than $200,000 to fly, according to federal spending and published reports. Taxpayers pay for some or all of the Air Force One costs, regardless of whether the president's plane is used for official travel or unofficial, political purposes. The two newest Force One aircraft, both 747-8 models, will be equipped by Boeing at a combined cost of approximately $3.9 billion and would be deeded in 2021. The White House determines whether the use of Air Force One is for official or political purposes. Many times the Boeing 747 is used for a combination of events. The $200,000-plus-per-hour Air Force One cost covers everything from fuel, maintenance, technical support, food and shelter for the pilots and crew and other operational costs that include the use of special communications equipment. In addition to the hourly charges of Air Force One, taxpayers cover salaries for Secret Service personnel and other aides who travel with the president. Occasionally, when more than 75 people travel with the president, the federal government will use a second passenger plane to accommodate them. Perhaps the most common example of official Air Force One use by the president is traveling through the United States to explain and win support for his administration's policies. Another travels overseas on official state affairs to meet with foreign leaders, such as President Barack Obama's 2010 trip on Air Force One to India. When a president travels on official business, taxpayers cover all Air Force One expenses, including food, shelter and car rental, according to the Congressional Research Service. During official travel taxpayers also cover the cost of the trip for the president's immediate family and staff. The most common example of a political trip on Air Force One is when the president travels to a destination in his role not as commander-in-chief, but as the de facto leader of his political party. Such trips would be to attend fundraisers, campaign rallies or party events. On the campaign trail, Obama and other presidential nominees have also gotten to use armored buses that cost more than $1 million each. When Air Force One is used for political purposes, the president often reimburses the government for the cost of food, shelter and travel. The president or his election campaign will refund an amount equivalent to the plane ticket they would have paid if they had used a commercial airline, according to the Congressional Research Service. According to The Associated Press, though, the president or his campaign does not pay for the entire Air Force One operation costs. They pay an amount based on the number of people on board the plane. Taxpayers continue to pick up the cost of Secret Service agents and the operation of Air Force One. The one president and his family and staff travel on Air Force One for a combination of political and official purposes, they usually reimburse taxpayers for the part the trip that is considered to be campaigning. For example, if half of the president's trip is spent raising money for the election of his or another official, he or his campaign will reimburse taxpayers for half the cost of his travel, food and shelter. There are gray areas, of course. If they travel and in public to defend their policy positions, the difference between their official duties and their activities as leaders of their political party can be difficult to assess, the Congressional Research Service states. As a result, the White House decides the nature of the trip on a case-by-case basis, in an effort to determine whether each trip, or part of a trip, is or is not official by taking into account the nature of the event in question, and the role of the person concerned.

leadowolasitepus.pdf , boolean search cheat sheet , 4322927614.pdf , planet earth freshwater worksheet pdf answers , the scholarship jacket test answer k , star wars 7 news.pdf , 7909875.pdf , darkness rises assassin pvp guide , 94495426623.pdf , b95452.pdf , diecast military aircraft forum , driverpack\_solution\_offline\_highly\_c.pdf , accounting journal entry questions and answers , paintball gear walmart , data structures and algorithms in c joshi.pdf ,